The first seven parts of this series exploring the connection between the George H. W. Bush family and cohorts' legacy of Big Oil, getting rich off of Nazis, forming the OSS and recovering the Magenta, Italy 1933 craft while the US military recovered craft here in 1941 in Cape Girardeau, MO and 1942 after the Battle of Los Angeles, and Truman ordered Vannevar Bush, his Presidential Science Advisor, the first in US history, to set up Oak Ridge Laboratories to house the Manhattan Project.

Then the folks responsible for the OSS and ending WWII while recovering the Magenta craft go on to start the CIA post-Roswell and keeping advanced tech hidden from the public good while plundering the world via the reverse-engineering of crash-retrievals, the CIA, Big Oil, Forever Wars, getting rich out of contracting out their own arms and oil contractors in the process.

This is the biggest corruption case in human history.

So I've been thinking a lot lately about how everything feels like "systems collapse" at the moment.

I've also been thinking a lot about how much pushback there's been against the likes of Elizondo and Grusch, et. al.

Just after Grusch came forward in the historic Congressional hearing in July 2023, Ken Klippenstein at the Intercept ran a hit piece on his PTSD based off of insider info he's received.

<https://theintercept.com/2023/08/09/ufo-david-grusch-clearance/>

A hit piece highlighting Grusch's PTSD after having served in Afghanistan, after one of his best friends died-by-suicide directly after a phone call with Grusch. Which left Grusch in a tail-spin of his own, threatening to take his own life and subsequently seeking treatment for his PTSD, after which he still held his clearances. How he served in war and, as stated in his interview with Ross Coulthart, his generation was tired of their forever wars, and that he "wanted to break out of the Matrix."

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x_9gTDXF9Vc&t=22s

Like most of us following this subject and world event's in general, it's safe to say we're fucking tired of all this, and Grusch, Elizondo, Mellon, and everyone else involved feel the same way.

The Matrix started when we discovered oil and the Rockefellers were made rich off of it.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Standard_Oil

Founding and early years

John D. Rockefeller c. 1872, shortly after founding Standard Oil

Standard Oil's prehistory began in 1863, as an Ohio partnership formed by industrialist John D. Rockefeller, his brother William Rockefeller, Henry Flagler, chemist Samuel Andrews, silent partner Stephen V. Harkness, and Oliver Burr Jennings, who had married the sister of William Rockefeller's wife.

In the early years, John D. Rockefeller dominated the combine; he was the single most important figure in shaping the new oil industry.[14] He quickly distributed power and the tasks of policy formation to a system of committees, but always remained the largest shareholder. Authority was centralized in the company's main office in Cleveland, but decisions in the office were made cooperatively.[15]

The Standard Oil Company (New Jersey), which was renamed Exxon in 1973 and ExxonMobil in 1999, remains the largest public oil company in the world. Many of the companies disassociated from Jersey Standard in 1911 remained powerful businesses through the twentieth century. These included the Standard Oil Company of New York, Standard Oil Company (Indiana), Standard Oil Company (California), Ohio Oil Company, Continental Oil Company, and Atlantic Refining Company.

If you've read the preceding installments, you'll see that George H. W. Bush and Dick Cheney and Donald Rumsfeld have had a long-term knowledge and fascination with the UFO/UAP subject.

Prior to 9/11, while Bush and Cheney weren't in political power, they joined forces on a corporate front via Dresser Industries, the company that Prescott Bush bought in 1928 and brought George H. W. Bush into in 1941 as he was attending Yale as part of the Skull and Bones fraternity that has produced many politicians and a few Presidents and was the main recruiter for the CIA thanks to Prescott Bush.

Dresser Industries was tied to the Rockefellers' Standard Oil Company and then split off to start Zapata Oil in 1951 with the help of the CIA. Zapata Oil was then used as a front for the CIA for drug-smuggling, spying on Cuba, etc., while also establishing Big Oil as we know it that has been destroying our planet and lead us into the climate crisis we're currently in.

Later, Cheney, Rumsfeld, and others were highly interested in the UFO subject, and after linking up with George H. W. Bush directly in Ford's administration, it wouldn't be a surprise if that's when they found quite a bit out.

There's a well-known story about Nixon taking his good friend and UFO-obsessive 'Honeymooners' star Jackie Gleason to a base in Florida to see a craft and dead bodies.

According to Danny Sheehan, days after Carter's election, he summons CIA Director George H. W. Bush to tell him about the UFO secret, and Bush tells him, "only if you keep me on as Director." Carter says no, and after he's inaugurated, he replaces Bush.

Carter has promised voters that he would release all government files on UFOs.

https://www.reddit.com/r/UFOs/comments/1dnhudf/president_jimmy_carter_protected_classified/

The excellent Grant Cameron released a book on Jimmy Carter and UFOs last year. It includes the mention of Carter crying with his head in his eyes after being debriefed.

<https://x.com/planethunter56/status/1657889151012995073>

That same year, Carter's first, he does away with the Atomic Energy Commission, and on July 27, 1977, signs into law the Department of Energy Organization Act. A week later the Department of Energy is formed, with the James V. Forrestal Building as its headquarters, which is beyond ironic considering the lore of Forrestal being part of MJ-12, tight with JFK, wanting to go public with knowledge of UFOs, and being suicided out of a window, with George H. W. Bush taking up his mantle.

Meanwhile, also in 1977, George H. W. Bush starts the oil and gas exploration company Arbusto Energy.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Arbusto_Energy

So all UFO secrets are kept now under the purview of the DoE and “nuclear energy,” Bush helps Reagan steal the election via the October Surprise with the help of his CIA crew, and Bush’s true reign of terror begins after years of CIA-lead coups and the Bush family living like kings/tyrants via the oil industry, the CIA, and now the Presidency. Iran-Contra, smuggling crack-cocaine into poor Black and Brown neighborhoods.

In 1986, George H. W. Bush meets up with Saudi King Fahd to discuss oil prices. The same King Fahd he was in business with.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/archive/politics/1986/04/07/bush-saudi-king-fahd-discuss-oil/9ad44bbd-e86a-4cd7-972f-c0c18d0750ae/>

In 1987, the Carlyle Group is started.

In 1991, George W. Bush is named the director of a new oil company in partnership with the Saudis.

<https://publicintegrity.org/politics/right-on-the-money-the-george-w-bush-profile/>

Harken Energy was in the right place at the right time. But it had something else — the right name. In January 1991 a global coalition led by President George Bush had mobilized an enormous military force to drive Saddam Hussein and the Iraqi army out of Kuwait. Another George Bush — the son of the President of the United States — was a director and shareholder of Harken Energy.

The few press reports about the deal questioned the motives of the government of Bahrain for making the deal with Harken Energy. Even the Wall Street Journal, customarily reserved on such matters, reported in a page-one analysis of the contract in December 1991 that it “raises the question of . . . an effort to cozy up to a presidential son.”

Bush says that he pulled no strings to win the contract, and that he in fact opposed the deal, but his presence may have been enough. According to Swetnam, the Bahrainis knew that Bush was on the company’s board of directors and “were clearly aware he was the President's son.”

Alas for Harken, the Bush name wasn't magical enough to ensure a strike off the coast of Bahrain. The company drilled two dry holes. Bush himself fared better. He sold off two-thirds of his holdings in Harken for nearly a million dollars, and bought a small share of the Texas Rangers, a deal that ultimately netted him — with a helping hand from Texas taxpayers — some $15 million.

Who invested in Harken Energy?

The Saudis.

https://www.salon.com/2004/03/12/unger_2/

If the Saudis had been happy with the presidency of George H.W. Bush — and they were — they must have been truly ecstatic, in the summer of 2000, that his son was the Republican candidate for president. Indeed, the relationship between the two dynasties had come a long way since the seventies when Saudi banking billionaire Khalid bin Mahfouz and Salem bin Laden had flown halfway around the world to Texas to see James Bath, George W. Bush's old friend from decades before. Even bin Mahfouz's subsequent financing of the Houston skyscraper for James Baker's family bank or the Saudi bailout of Harken Energy that helped George W. Bush make his fortune were small potatoes compared with what had happened since.

The Saudis could give donations to Bush-related charities. They could invest in the Carlyle Group's funds or contract with one of the many companies owned by Carlyle in the defense sector or other industries. (People tied to Carlyle as partners, advisers, counselors or directors of its companies have included the most powerful people in the world: Former president George H.W. Bush, former secretary of state James Baker, former British prime minister John Major, former secretary of defense Frank Carlucci and former head of the Office of Management and Budget Richard Darman.)

Oh look, the Saudis also invested in Halliburton.

And the Saudis were also linked to Dick Cheney through Halliburton, the giant Texas oil exploration company that had huge interests in the kingdom.

In 1992, Reagan and Bush are voted out of office.

In 1998, Halliburton and Dresser Industries merged.

In 2000, Bush and Cheney stole the election from Al Gore, whose main focus was the climate crisis.

In 2001, Bush's Carlyle Group was directly involved in 9/11.

In 2003, Bush, Cheney and Rumsfeld invaded Iraq and Afghanistan and devastated the Middle East.

Aerospace and construction companies like Cheney's Kellogg, Brown and Root made more money than anyone on this invasion.

<https://www.thenation.com/article/world/corporations-war-spending/>

The political climate created by the Global War on Terror (GWOT), as Bush administration officials quickly dubbed it, set the stage for humongous increases in the Pentagon budget. In the first year after the 9/11 attacks and the invasion of Afghanistan, defense spending rose by more than 10 percent and that was just the beginning. It would, in fact, increase annually for the next decade, which was unprecedented in American history. The Pentagon budget peaked in 2010 at the highest level since World War II — over $800 billion, substantially more than the country spent on its forces at the height of the Korean or Vietnam Wars or during President Ronald Reagan's vaunted military buildup of the 1980s.

The benefits of the post-9/11 surge in Pentagon spending have been distributed in a highly concentrated fashion. More than one-third of all contracts now go to just five major weapons companies — Lockheed Martin, Boeing, General Dynamics, Raytheon, and Northrop Grumman. Those five received more than $166 billion in such contracts in fiscal year 2020 alone. To put such a figure in perspective, the $75 billion in Pentagon contracts awarded to Lockheed Martin that year was significantly more than one and one-half times the entire 2020 budget for the State Department and the Agency for International Development, which together totaled $44 billion.

While it's true that the biggest financial beneficiaries of the post-9/11 military spending surge were those five weapons contractors, they were anything but the only ones to cash in. Companies benefiting from the buildup of the past 20 years also included logistics and construction firms like Kellogg, Brown & Root (KBR) and Bechtel, as well as armed private security contractors like Blackwater and Dyncorp. The Congressional Research Service estimates that in FY2020 the spending for contractors of all kinds had grown to $420 billion, or well over half of the total Pentagon budget. Companies in all three categories noted above took advantage of "wartime" conditions — in which both speed of delivery and less rigorous oversight came to be considered the norms — to overcharge the government or even engage in outright fraud.

The best-known reconstruction and logistics contractor in Iraq and Afghanistan was Halliburton, through its KBR subsidiary. At the start of both the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, Halliburton was the recipient of the Pentagon's Logistics Civil Augmentation Program contracts. Those open-ended arrangements involved coordinating support functions for troops in the field, including setting up military bases, maintaining equipment, and providing food and laundry services. By 2008, the company had received more than $30 billion for such work.

Halliburton's role would prove controversial indeed, reeking as it did of self-dealing and blatant corruption. The notion of privatizing military-support services was first initiated in the early 1990s by Dick Cheney when he was secretary of defense in the George H.W. Bush administration and Halliburton got the contract to figure out how to do it. I suspect you won't be surprised to learn that Cheney then went on to serve as the CEO of Halliburton until he became vice president under George W. Bush in 2001. His journey was a (if not the) classic case of that revolving door between the Pentagon and the defense industry, now used by so many government officials and generals or admirals, with all the obvious conflicts-of-interest it entails.

Once it secured its billions for work in Iraq, Halliburton proceeded to vastly overcharge the Pentagon for basic services, even while doing shoddy work that put US troops at risk — and it would prove to be anything but alone in such activities.

Recently, Walter Kirn, who interviewed David Grusch for The County Highway publication following the hearing on July 26, 2023, stated on a podcast that a whistleblower, i.e. David Grusch, told him that Dick Cheney was at the top of the UFO/UAP secrecy cabal.

Apparently a photography exists of Dick Cheney.

This is an excerpt from a 2001 documentary where an alleged Area 51 Groom Lake/Papoose Lake S4 sentry going by the pseudonym of Connor O’Ryan had defected and provided information on the UFO program to USAF Lt. Colonel Wandelle C. Stevens in 1991.

O’Ryan is alleged to have told Mr. Stevens about a photograph depicting Dick Cheney standing next to crashed discs in 1991. At the time, Cheney would’ve been Sec. Def.

The documentary is called UFO Hypotheses: S4 Informers Volume One (2001).

Disclaimer, I’m not familiar with the credibility of Mr. Stevens, the documentary maker, or the purported S4 insider. I just think it’s a very interesting guess or coincidence that Dick Cheney had already been outed as being a Program insider decades ago.

Here's a passage from Richard Dolan's book "UFOs and the National Security State: 1973-1991" "UFOs and the National Security State: 1973-1991" about Cheney:

But of course Cheney didn't think Disclosure was necessary. Because he already knew the secrets and stood to gain as much as he could from them.

Here's Ross Coulthart on the matter:

<https://x.com/UAPJames/status/1833525079134949563>

David Grusch says Dick Cheney is at the top of the 'classified UFO information pyramid', per Walter Kirn. Ross Coulthart said he will release the names of "legacy program gatekeepers", including one who served on the National Security Council with Cheney.

So who is Dick Cheney again?

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dick_Cheney

He began his political career as an intern for Congressman William A. Steiger, eventually working his way into the White House during the Nixon and Ford administrations. He served as White House chief of staff from 1975 to 1977. In 1978, he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, and represented Wyoming's at-large congressional district from 1979 to 1989, briefly serving as House minority whip in 1989. He was appointed Secretary of Defense during the presidency of George H. W. Bush, and held the position for most of Bush's term from 1989 to 1993.[7] As secretary, he oversaw Operation Just Cause in 1989 and Operation Desert Storm in 1991. While out of office during the Clinton administration, he was the chairman and CEO of Halliburton from 1995 to 2000.

In July 2000, Cheney was chosen by presumptive Republican presidential nominee George W. Bush as his running mate in the 2000 presidential election. They defeated their Democratic opponents, incumbent vice president Al Gore and senator Joe Lieberman. In 2004, Cheney was reelected to his second term as vice president with Bush as president, defeating their Democratic opponents Senators John Kerry and John Edwards. During Cheney's tenure as vice president, he played a leading behind-the-scenes role in the George W. Bush administration's response to the September 11 attacks and coordination of the Global War on Terrorism. He was an early proponent of invading Iraq, alleging that the Saddam Hussein regime possessed weapons of mass destruction program and had an operational relationship with Al-Qaeda; however, neither allegation was ever substantiated. He also pressured the intelligence community to provide intelligence consistent with the administration's rationales for invading Iraq. Cheney was often criticized for the Bush administration's policies regarding the campaign against terrorism, for his support of wiretapping by the National Security Agency (NSA) and for his endorsement of the U.S.'s "enhanced interrogation" torture program.^{[8][9][10][11]}

So yeah, Dick Cheney. Straight up evil mastermind. We all know this. The current state of our world is honestly really fucked because of the Bush and Cheney reign of greed and power and terror, worse than whatever they themselves deem as terrorism.

So let's skip back in time to the really fun stuff.

In the 1920s, there was talk of a Stargate that was found in Iraq, with the world's rich and powerful seeking access to it. Lots of stuff you can dig into about that, but you can start with this short clip here:

<https://www.youtube.com/shorts/i3WlgE-fgZE>

In the 1920s, the British conducted a bombing campaign as the Ottoman Empire was falling.

The 1920s British air bombing campaign in Iraq

<https://www.bbc.com/news/magazine-29441383>

An armed rebellion in Iraq. Debate at Westminster on how to counter the insurgency. The deployment of RAF bombers to defeat the uprising.

With British planes once again in the skies over Iraq, it sounds like a story from the last few days. But Britain first tried to exercise control over Iraq from the air in the 1920s.

The end of World War One left Britain and France in command of the Middle East — as the defeated Ottoman Empire fell apart. The allies then carved up the region with a series of “mandates”.

It gave them control of new countries, with the notion of independence postponed until the peoples of the region were considered ready to rule themselves.

One of Britain’s mandates was Iraq — Mesopotamia as it was then. But welding together a new country and subjugating disparate ethnic and religious groups who felt that they had simply swapped one imperial Turkish master for another British one proved costly.

It’s rumored that in 1991, when Bush Sr. with Cheney as his Secretary of Defense invaded Iraq for the first time, they were looking for this Stargate.

And that post-9/11, they were doing the same.

<https://www.newsweek.com/us-invade-iraq-ancient-stargate-1766705>

Fact Check: Did U.S. Invade Iraq to Access ‘Ancient Stargate’?

One such conspiracy theory has resurfaced recently on a Reddit post. The post, located in the conspiracy community on the platform, shows a picture of Iraq’s historical landmark, the Great Ziggurat of Ur.

“This is the real reason we invaded Iraq. Ancient alien Stargate portal located in the Great Ziggurat of Ur in Iraq,” Reddit user PalatableMahogany said in a caption.

The Great Ziggurat of Ur is an ancient structure that used to be at the center of Mesopotamia, a historical region in western Asia. The Ziggurat was originally built during the Early Bronze Age and reconstructed in the 6th century.

Today, it stands remarkably well preserved, in a remote pit of desert in Iraq’s Dhi Qar Province, according to the Madain Project, an online archive of Abrahamic History and Archaeology.

Often dubbed “Iraq’s answer to the pyramids,” the structure (and others like it) typically had several terraced levels as opposed to the pyramids’ flat walls, but didn’t have interior chambers.

It originally stood between 70 and 100 feet high, according to the art history resource, Smarthistory.

Mesopotamia used to be home to the Sumerians, which was one of the first civilizations to exist, dating back to 3,000 BC. The civilization worshiped a group of deities called Anunnaki, according to The Oxford Companion to World Mythology written by David Leemings.

The location was initially used by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein’s forces as a military facility, the Tallil Air Base, which was largely destroyed by the American forces in 1991, according to U.S. military records. Then, in 2003, the U.S. retook it, and the Pentagon closed public access to the land adjacent to the structure, after building a new airfield and military base there, as Fox News reported in 2009.

While the move did restrict public access to the area, as the Fox News and other reports at the time noted, it remained open to U.S. military personnel stationed in the area, turning the location into something of a tourist hot spot for American troops.

This was a source of much frustration for Iraqi citizens, who were not allowed to enter the holy site, especially amid reports, including by the Guardian, citing local aid workers, about cases of vandalism targeting the ancient structure. These incidents, the report noted, resulted in the Ziggurat being briefly declared off limits to U.S. troops as well.

The Pentagon eventually handed control over the archaeological landmark back to the Iraqi government in May 2009, according to the U.S. military records, removing its location outside the official bounds of the base.

<https://www.newarab.com/news/us-invaded-iraq-over-saddams-alien-portal-conspiracy-theorist>

The US-led 2003 invasion of Iraq was launched because former dictator Saddam Hussein had a portal to an alien world, a conspiracy theorist has claimed.

Michael Salla, an Australian self-styled expert in “extraterrestrial politics”, believes that the United States and its allies invaded the country to take control of Hussein’s access to alien weapons through the stargate.

Salla believes that extraterrestrials from an undiscovered tenth planet in the Solar System have long been interfering in human politics.

“I think that was a big part of the reason why the Bush Administration went into Iraq, to stop Hussein from revealing this information and to also get control themselves,” Salla said, according to British newspaper The Daily Star.

He added that the US and Britain used the pretext of weapons of mass destruction and alleged connections between Saddam and al-Qaeda to invade Iraq, topple Saddam, and secure the portal for themselves.

Salla says that the portal is located under one of Iraq’s ancient ziggurat temples.

The “exopolitical” analyst’s other theories include that the oldest pyramid on earth is hidden under snow on Antarctica and that the US Navy has a secret space programme.

More than one million Iraqis were killed as a result of the invasion, and the subsequent occupation of the country.

Iraq descended into sectarian strife after the US occupiers dismantled Hussein's government and military apparatus.

The chaos helped give rise to the Islamic State group, through its predecessor al-Qaeda in Iraq.

Many observers believe seizing Iraq's oil reserves and ousting Hussein were the primary reasons for the US-led invasion.

Gilgamesh tomb believed found

Archaeologists in Iraq believe they may have found the lost tomb of King Gilgamesh — the subject of the oldest “book” in history.

The Epic Of Gilgamesh — written by a Middle Eastern scholar 2,500 years before the birth of Christ — commemorated the life of the ruler of the city of Uruk, from which Iraq gets its name.

Now, a German-led expedition has discovered what is thought to be the entire city of Uruk — including, where the Euphrates once flowed, the last resting place of its famous King.

“I don't want to say definitely it was the grave of King Gilgamesh, but it looks very similar to that described in the epic,” Jorg Fassbinder, of the Bavarian department of Historical Monuments in Munich, told the BBC World Service's Science in Action programme.

Magnetic

In the book — actually a set of inscribed clay tablets — Gilgamesh was described as having been buried under the Euphrates, in a tomb apparently constructed when the waters of the ancient river parted following his death.

“We found just outside the city an area in the middle of the former Euphrates river; the remains of such a building which could be interpreted as a burial,” Mr

Fassbinder said.

He said the amazing discovery of the ancient city under the Iraqi desert had been made possible by modern technology.

“By differences in magnetisation in the soil, you can look into the ground,” Mr Fassbinder added.

“The difference between mudbricks and sediments in the Euphrates river gives a very detailed structure.”

This creates a magnetogram, which is then digitally mapped, effectively giving a town plan of Uruk.

‘Venice in the desert’

“The most surprising thing was that we found structures already described by Gilgamesh,” Mr Fassbinder stated.

“We covered more than 100 hectares. We have found garden structures and field structures as described in the epic, and we found Babylonian houses.”

But he said the most astonishing find was an incredibly sophisticated system of canals.

“Very clearly, we can see in the canals some structures showing that flooding destroyed some houses, which means it was a highly developed system.

“[It was] like Venice in the desert.”

The Tomb of Gilgamesh was discovered by German archaeologist in early March 2003, and in short order, the US Invasion of Iraq began under Dick Cheney and Donald Rumsfeld and George H. W. Bush’s watch.

https://www.reddit.com/r/aliens/comments/1fhj4en/dick_cheney_the_american_architect_of_war_keeper/

Dick Cheney, often regarded as one of the most controversial figures in recent

American history, can be seen as the ultimate gatekeeper of the military-industrial complex — a man whose influence extended far beyond his official titles. Dubbed the “American Stalin” by critics, Cheney’s tenure as Vice President under George W. Bush marked an era of aggressive foreign policy, where wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were not merely about oil or national security, but rather a covert mission to acquire ancient artifacts and weaponize exotic technologies for future wars.

The official narrative for the invasion of Iraq and Afghanistan hinged on combating terrorism and the supposed existence of weapons of mass destruction. However, those who dare to look beyond this facade find a darker, more complex motive. For Cheney and his inner circle, these invasions were about securing ancient artifacts — items of power that could potentially alter the fabric of reality itself. The discovery and acquisition of these artifacts were deemed vital for the U.S. to maintain its dominance on the global stage.

In the early 2000s, intelligence reports began to surface about an ancient Stargate buried deep beneath the sands of Iraq, specifically in the vicinity of the ancient city of Ur. Sources within the CIA and the NSA confirmed that Saddam Hussein had unearthed this relic during a clandestine archaeological dig in the late 1990s. Cheney, always a step ahead, saw this as a direct threat. A fully functional Stargate could allow instantaneous travel not only across the globe but potentially through time.

Military intelligence, specifically the DIA (Defense Intelligence Agency) and JSOC (Joint Special Operations Command), were briefed on Operation Babylon. The goal was to neutralize Saddam’s hold on the Stargate and bring it under U.S. control. As early as 2002, reconnaissance teams had already infiltrated Iraqi borders, mapping out the subterranean structure of the ancient city.

By March 2003, the invasion of Iraq commenced. While mainstream media focused on the hunt for WMDs, JSOC units led by General Stanley McChrystal spearheaded an incursion into the ancient city of Ur. Within days, Cheney received confirmation: the Stargate was secured. Under the guise of establishing a military base, U.S. forces encircled the area, and specialized teams from DARPA and the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) were flown in to study and reverse-engineer the artifact.

Cheney's obsession with exotic technology didn't end with Iraq. In Afghanistan, rumors had long circulated about ancient craft buried deep within the Kandahar mountains. Local legend spoke of a "portal" in the mountains, an area where time behaved erratically, and strange metallic structures were occasionally seen by nomadic tribes. The Taliban, aware of these rumors, had sealed off the region and vehemently refused any foreign intrusion.

The discovery of this craft was not an accident. Satellite imagery collected by the NRO and the DIA had identified anomalies in the region — specifically, areas that seemed to emit high levels of electromagnetic energy. Cheney, through his deep ties with the CIA's black ops division, ordered the creation of Task Force Golem, a covert unit comprised of Delta Force operators, CIA paramilitary officers, and scientists from DARPA.

In early 2004, Task Force Golem embarked on a mission into the treacherous terrain of the Kandahar mountains. The operation, cloaked in secrecy, lasted for three months. When they finally emerged, they carried with them classified artifacts and evidence of an ancient craft — a structure partially embedded into the rock, made of an unknown metal alloy. Reports leaked that the craft contained a chamber with inscriptions not found in any known human language, and a crystalline device believed to be a form of time manipulation technology.

Cheney's grasp tightened as this craft was transported to a facility in Nevada, where it was dissected and studied by leading physicists and engineers from the Skunk Works (Lockheed Martin's Advanced Development Programs) and the Sandia National Laboratories.

To ensure control over these discoveries, Cheney established a network of loyalists within key agencies. The CIA, under Director George Tenet, and the NSA were brought into the fold. However, Cheney's reach extended even further. The Department of Energy (DOE), known for its covert research into exotic technologies, was tasked with managing the scientific aspect of these ancient artifacts. Military units like JSOC and Delta Force acted as the muscle, while the CIA and the NSA provided intelligence and security.

One of the most secretive components of this network was a clandestine division within the NSA known as the “Silent Hand.” This unit, answerable only to Cheney, operated with complete autonomy. It was responsible for decrypting ancient texts, translating the alien languages found within the Kandahar craft, and extracting any usable data from these discoveries.

Cheney’s long-term strategy was clear: to weaponize these ancient technologies and solidify the U.S.’s military supremacy for generations. Through this covert program, America could not only wage wars on Earth but extend its influence beyond, perhaps even through the manipulation of time itself. This agenda laid the groundwork for a future conflict — one that would not be fought with conventional weapons but with the very fabric of space and time.

Despite leaving office in 2009, Cheney’s influence persisted. The program, now under the guise of various black-budget projects, continued its research into these technologies. Generations of military and intelligence operatives, indoctrinated into this shadowy world, work tirelessly to weaponize the artifacts, ensuring that Cheney’s legacy endures.

In the shadows, Cheney remains the gatekeeper, orchestrating the global chessboard from behind the scenes. The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were merely the opening moves in a far grander game — a game where the spoils were not oil or land, but control over the unknown and the power it wields.

In 2018, the FOIA that Hillary Clinton’s team had filed for the the tomb of Gilgamesh was discovered.

So in 2003, when we invaded Iraq we also took control over Baghdad Historical museum where thousands upon thousands of artifacts were stolen and sold on the black market. Around that time, archeologists thought they found the tomb of Gilgamesh:

Well Hobby Lobby got a hold of the Epic of Gilgamesh original Dream tablet somehow:

Well:

Saddam called himself son of the Babylonian King Nebuchadnezzar and had stamped the bricks of ancient Babylon with his name and titles next to him.[185] [186] During the Gulf War, Saddam claimed the historic roles of Nebuchadnezzar, Saladin and Gamal Abdel Nasser. [118]

He partially reconstructed the Ziggurat of Ur, or the Tower of Babel.

The reason I'm bringing all of this up, is that Iraq and the Middle East is the literal cradle of civilization. All of the region's cultural mythology involved beings from the sky that came down and created human beings from the decomposing organic matter of Earth, breathing life into our bodies to animate us.

I'm not asking you to nail the coffin on what you think phenomena is about, I'm asking you to consider more than you think you know now. We all know we invaded Iraq on false claims of weapons of mass destruction, yet whistleblowers claim UAP are outperforming Top Gun pilots and manipulating Nuclear ICBM controls, and appearing to some to abduct, rape, or perform surgeries on, among a spectrum of other contact/abductee experiences.

James Lacatski has spoken about the fact that the UAP topic, involves multiple cultural variables, and is intermingled with technology and "paranormal" or "woo"

When were JSOC and the OGA set up as reported by Matt Ford of The Good Trouble Show and Christopher Sharp of The Liberation Times back in November 2023?

March Motherfucking 2003.

Two sources told DailyMail.com that the OGA coordinates with Special Operations Forces such as SEAL teams or Delta Force under the Pentagon's Joint Special Operations Command (JSOC), or nuclear weapons experts such as the Nuclear Emergency Support Team (NEST), to collect the crashed or landed craft.

Sources said the CIA office then often hands the wreckage or material over to private aerospace contractors for analysis, where it is not subject to rigorous government audits and can be shielded with protections for trade secrets.

'The CIA is the portfolio manager or owner of the UAP [Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena] crash retrieval operation,' one source, who has shared their information with Congress, told DailyMail.com.

'The Department of Energy national labs are materials analysis contractors whenever recovered radioisotopes are involved but not always just radioisotope materials. The aerospace-defense industry are also contractors that specifically do not handle any recovered radioisotopes, but they handle the other non-radioactive material – and intact craft.'

Multiple sources said that many of the people involved in these programs may not even realize they are dealing with non-human craft, due to the intense security and compartmentalization of information in such top secret programs.

Then Knapp meets Robert Bigelow, they continue meeting up to talk about the subject.

Bigelow hears about family on haunted Skinwalker Ranch, and buys it. Family in the end were so scared they slept huddled in a room together and said they heard metallic noises from under the earth.

Bigelow sets up NIDS there, and eventually things calm down and NIDS is shut down.

2002, Knapp writes an article in Las Vegas Mercury about Skinwalker Ranch that goes international.

Knapp and Colm Kelleher write Hunt for the Skinwalker based on Robert Bigelow's research at Skinwalker Ranch. The book makes its way into the hands of DIA like James Lacatski in 2007 who were in the Middle East, which lead to AAWSAP.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Advanced_Aerospace_Threat_Identification_Program

Origins

Initiated by then Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nevada)[9] as the Advanced Aerospace Weapon Systems Applications Program (AAWSAP) to study unexplained aerial phenomena (UAP) at the urging of Reid's friend, Nevada billionaire and governmental contractor Robert Bigelow,[10] and with support from the late senators Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) and Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), the program began in the DIA in 2007 and was budgeted $22 million over its five years of operation.[3] [4]

The United States Air Force facility known as "Area 51" is located in Reid's home state of Nevada. In the 1970s, after revived interest in the "1947 Roswell UFO incident", "Area 51" was rumored by ufologists and conspiracy theorists to be the US government's storage location for the crashed alien craft for study.[11]

June 24, 2009 letter from Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid to Deputy Secretary of Defense William Lynn regarding the Advanced Aerospace Threat and Identification Program (AATIP)

When interviewed in the aftermath of publicity surrounding the AATIP, Reid expressed pride in his accomplishment, and was quoted as saying "I think it's one of the good things I did in my congressional service. I've done something that no one has done before.”[3][5] Reid explained the reasoning behind his sponsorship of the program by saying “I’m interested in science, and in helping the American public understand what the hell is going on” and stated that “hundreds and hundreds of papers” have been available since the program was completed and that “Most all of it, 80 percent at least, is public” adding “I wanted it public, it was made public, and you guys have not even looked at it.”[5]

A 2009 letter by Reid was published by KLAS-TV investigative journalists George Knapp and Matt Adams, where the Senator states that AATIP has made “much progress” and recommends the creation of a special access program for specific parts of AATIP.[12]

After the Hunt for the Skinwalker made its way to the DIA and the likes of James Lacatski, it was the DIA who headed AAWSAP and later AATIP.

Who was installed at the DIA in 2012 when AATIP was shut down?

Christian Nationalists Mike Flynn and David Schedd.

<https://www.dia.mil/About/History/Directors-of-DIA/>

Later James Lacatski co-authored Skinwalkers at the Pentagon with Knapp and Kelleher, which was released Oct. 21, 2021, after David Grusch came forward to Congress and testified behind closed doors and the Pentagon set up its sham office to say there was nothing to see here.

A new book by George Knapp says the Pentagon takes UFOs (and more) very seriously

The government investigation of UFOs that was acknowledged this year is part of a much broader inquiry into paranormal phenomena, a new book contends.

Las Vegas television journalist George Knapp and his co-authors write in the book that recent Pentagon studies of UFOs, first brought to light by the New York Times, were only part of the story.

The book, “Skinwalkers at the Pentagon: An Insiders’ Account of the Secret Government UFO Program,” explores extensive government studies into anomalies such as abductions, wormholes, antigravity, psychic activity, invisibility cloaking, and fusion technology.

Skinwalker Ranch in northeast Utah, referenced in the book’s title, has reportedly been a hotbed of such abnormalities.

“They documented and investigated hundreds of incidents,” Knapp told State of Nevada. “Just weird stuff. I mean, animal mutilations, dogs vaporized, invisible entities, cruising around UFOs, ... shadow creatures, poltergeist activity, ice circles, the equivalent of crop circles.

Long spearheading study of the ranch was Robert Bigelow, a wealthy Las Vegas businessman who has a long interest in the paranormal. He bought the property when he heard stories of what went on there but no longer owns it.

“He’s a guy who has spent more money investigating UFOs and the paranormal than any person in the history of the world,” Knapp said.

Knapp co-author Colm Kelleher said visits to the ranch during privately run research led to what he called “poltergeist activity” back home for the investigators.

“We had five military intelligence people who were on the ranch at different times,” he said. “They all encountered unusual phenomena on the ranch, and then 3,000 miles away a few days later, they would have poltergeist activity, they would have paranormal effects.

“They would have these small, lighted orbs that were floating through the house, different colors, sometimes blue, sometimes red, sometimes white, there would be shadowy figures that would wake up and there would be a shadowy figure standing at the foot of their bed.”

Kelleher said New York Times coverage “essentially focused on military pilot encounters with UFOs,” but that only scratched the surface of what the government was studying.

“The purpose of writing the book was really to correct the record because 95% of what the (Pentagon) program was involved with has never been made public,” he said.

State of Nevada listener Reed of Las Vegas, who said he hailed from near Skinwalker Ranch, wondered why most of the attention comes from outsiders and not locals.

“It’s a rural community,” Knapp responded. “Maybe people don’t like to spill the beans about this stuff. But they know.”
